22.7. – 5.8.2012

Financial meltdown in Greece this year posed many questions for the European Union and its inhabitants. Is there such a thing as European solidarity, or will national interests always prevail? The European parliament has rescued the Greek economy, and saved the Union, but does this really serve the people? Meanwhile Italy has an unelected government of 'technocrats'. Are we right to be worried about a lack of democracy and social justice in the European experiment?

Over two weeks, young people from Croatia, the Czech Republic, Germany and Great Britain will work together to create a unique theatre show about our future. Within theatre and music workshops we will put your opinion about Europe into scene. What does European identity mean to you? What could the Union be like as a positive vision? We are going to express criticism as well as benefits we expect. At the end show will be performed in Liberec and Prague.
